Hi Mathy,

Happy be-lated Thanksgiving. I got this from one of the anti- frackers that sends me a ton of notices. But I had to ask is this true and if so what is Administrator Jackson going to do to intervene and help these people?

At some point a bunch of phone calls is just not sufficient when you have government officials who are refusing to listen and families who based on what is written below seem rather desperate to protect their fresh water source, even if it is trucked in.

To me it doesn't seem as if anyone involved has completely thought through the consequences that have lead to this point, or what is to happen afterwards.

Regards,
Beryl

Here's what you can do:

1) Call the Governor Tom Corbett at 717-787-2500

2) Call DEP Secretary Michael Krancer at 717-787-7116

See below for more information:

Hello friends -

(You may have gotten this already - please understand - and please forward)

This is an amazing story and we're about to create an amazing response.

In short - several Pennsylvania families have been getting water delivery from the gas company responsible for ruining their own water. Three years now. But on Nov. 30 the delivery will stop. Then what can they do? One of the young girls told her mom that she didn't want to use their water again because she didn't want to get that rash back. (A rash is a small thing compared to the endocrine disrupters, suppressors of gene expression, spontaneous abortions - and the terrible, terrible other things that can happen to these folks if they are forced to use that filthy toxic water. And really - should they have to, and could they afford to buy water for every need?)

The girl's father has been calling the Pennsylvania governor and the DEC daily, worried about his family and the other folks in the area similarly affected, and now has been told that if he calls again he'll be arrested for harassment!

We can make those calls for him! If you even make one call to each - just once - that will be powerful. If you do it more than once, then bless you!

Thanks, JK

Dimock Residents with Poisoned Water Need Your Help!

What can Pennsylvania families, whose water has been poisoned by a big oil and gas company, do when the government watch dog agency that is charged with ensuring their health turns their back on them?!

Craig Sautner, one of those residents, has been calling the Pennsylvania DEP for weeks upon finding out that his fresh water supply, currently being paid for by the company that poisoned his water, Cabot Oil and Gas, will stop being delivered at the end of this month. Sadly, the PA DEP has sanctioned this decision and is effectively leaving these innocent citizens all alone, forced to live with their poisoned water. To add insult to injury, after making calls to the PA DEP this past week, Craig Sautner was actually threatened with arrest for harassment because he wants to know why their fresh water is being cut off, why Cabot is not being prosecuted, and what his family is supposed to do now.

Truly, it is heartbreaking to find out that the government watchdogs who are charged with protecting the public are siding with the poisonous industry wreaking havoc on the lives of these innocent people. There must be a response to this sort of deplorable governmental negligence.

Here's what you can do:

1) Call the Governor Tom Corbett at 717-787-2500

2) Call DEP Secretary Michael Krancer at 717-787-7116

Tell them, "My name is _____ and I am calling on behalf of the citizens of PA. I'm alarmed that you are silencing good innocent people who only wish to have fresh, clean, drinkable water. As their government watchdog, you must ensure that Cabot Oil and Gas continues fresh water deliveries to the families in Dimock past the end of this month. Cabot Oil and Gas must be held accountable and live up to its agreement to repair the water supply to original or better condition."

With your help, we will continue to help expose these injustices and will bring about more sane energy policies where we are not forced to poison ourselves to power our lives.
